Dated January 9th, 1867, and put in evidence (See page 140 of present Trial). No impostor would have written such a letter, to a lady ho was going to impose upon; but Gosford, Roger Tichbornes friend and executor, had denied everything ho said, and his identity. What would an impostor have cared about the trees. Look at the fact that he mentions his writing to Gosford from almost every place in South America. 1, El wick-terrace, Shooters-hill, S. E. Do you not think that with advantage to the Claimant you might quote the romantic (and I think, corresponding) career of the late unhappy young Lord Ockham, who, after having received a first-rate education, entered our Royal Navy, from which he deserted and went as a common sailor, where he had to mop-up decks after the passengers had been sick, and submit himself to all sorts of drudgery and hardships. During the time of his being a common workman (at 27s. a week) at the Isle of Dogs, he was a constant visitor at my house, up, almost, to the date of his death--consumption brought on by hard work and exposure; and I can, if you wish it, furnish you with all particulars of that strange young mans career, which, in my opinion, has a strictanalogy to that of your client, only that it is still more astounding and to be wondered at; for poor young Ockham had not only forgotten (at the...
