Excerpt: . . . ten pamphlets have great and general influence. The facility with which the same truths may be repeatedly enforced by placing them daily in different lights in newspapers which are every where read, gives a great n chance of establishing them. And we now find that it is not only right to strike while the iron is hot, but that it may be very practicable to heat it by continually striking. I suppose all may now correspond with more freedom, and I shall be glad to hear from you as often The death of this amiable and excellent peraon had happened a few weeks before the writing of this letter. --He had long been the intimate friend of Dr. Price, and one of the principal members of his congregation at Newingtou Greco. --He was the author of several valuable works on moral and political subjects,...
