Quasimodo, nevertheless, looked in from time to time on the succeeding days. She strove as much as she could to conceal her aversion when he brought her the basket of provisions or the pitcher of water; but he was sure to perceive the slightest movement of that kind, and then he went sorrowfully away. One day he came just at the moment when she was fondling Djali for a while he stood full of thought before the graceful group of the goat and the Egyptian. At length, DEGREES shaking his huge, misshapen head: My misfortune, said he, is that I am too much like a human creature. Would to God that I had been a downright beast, like that goat! She cast on him a look of astonishment. Oh! he replied to that look-well do I know why, and immediately retired. Another time, when he came to the door of the cell, which he never entered, La Esmeralda was singing an old Spanish ballad: she knew not the meaning of the words, but it dwelt upon her ear because the Bohemian women had lulled her with it when quite a child. At the abrupt appearance of that ugly face the damsel stopped short, with an involuntary start, in the middle of her song. The unhappy bell-ringer dropped upon his knees at the threshold of the door, and with a beseeching look clasped his clumsy, shapeless hands. Oh! said he, sorrowfully, go on,...
